The President at the same time announced that the services of the Roosevelt division would not be accepted. Under the advice of experts on both sides of the water, he said, the volunteers could not be employed, nor could he avail himself of the "fine vigor and enthusiasm of former President Roosevelt for the expedition."

PETROGRAD, May 19.—Minister of war Kerensky, addressing the congress of peasants, announced his determination to introduce an iron discipline into the army. He made an impassioned appeal for support in restoring the morale of Russian military forces and his speech was greeted with applause.

TWO ZEPPELINS DESTROYED.
COPENHAGEN, May 19.—Destruction of the Zeppelins L-22, reported without details in an official British announcement on Monday, occurred off the coast of Denmark, according to the accounts of eyewitnesses from villages on the shore. These accounts indicate that not one but two Zeppelins were destroyed on that day inasmuch as the explosion of an airship off Terschelling was reported from Holland at a point too distant to cover the same case. The loss of the second airship is attributed to lightning.

GERMAN PAPERS ANNOUNCE ARRIVAL OF U. S. FLEET.

RUSS GOVERNMENT REFLECTS SEPARATE PEACE
PETROGRAD, via London, May 19.—The provisional government declared today that it was united in the rejection of a separate peace and the adoption of a course governing the re-establishment of a general peace which will not tend either to domination over other nations or to seizure of their national possessions—a peace without annexation or indemnities. The government expresses its conviction that the Russians will not suffer the Germans to destroy their western allies.

ITALIAN PROGRESS TOWARD TRIEST IS ADMITTED
The recent intensive fighting on the British front in France has subsided and the activities along the French line in the Alsace region are confined mainly to counter attacks by the Germans. The Italian offensive, with Triest for its objective, is therefore being watched with perhaps more active interest than any of the other vast military operations in progress.

General Cadorna's army have a heavy task before them with the cream of Austria's fighting forces defending the naturally strong defensive positions in the Isonzo region. The Italians admittedly are making progress. The Italian forces already have taken more than 5,000 prisoners and numerous guns while the Austrian reports claim the capture of some 2,000 prisoners in the desperate engagements that have been fought.

KING'S DAUGHTERS TAKE MOTOR TRIP; CONVENTION ENDS

Automobile Tour to St. James Park, Pleasant Event of Last Day.

MRS. COCHRAN IS HOSTESS

Her Magnificent Home Thrown Open For Visitors' Inspection and Organ Recital Given For Their Benefit; Convention Is Highly Successful.

An automobile trip to St. James Park, the magnificent home of Mrs. Sarah B. Cochran, yesterday afternoon and a final session of the First Presbyterian Church last night, brought to a close the twenty-second annual convention of the King's Daughters of Pennsylvania to a close.

The trip to Mrs. Cochran's home was an unique entertainment feature, arranged by the local King's Daughters, and it proved highly enjoyable to the 75 or more delegates. Thirteen automobiles left the church shortly after 2:30 o'clock. At Linden Hall Mrs. Cochran received her guests in the magnificent reception hall of her home and granted them the freedom of the remainder of the lower floor. She was assisted in receiving the guests by her sister, Mrs. Moore. A recital was given on the big pipe organ and Mrs. Helen Knox gave several vocal solos, accompanied by Miss Marie Moore, at the piano. After that Madam Barkat made a short address and Mrs. Fred Derby called upon the delegates to tender a vote of thanks to Mrs. Cochran. This was done by waving a handkerchief salute. Many of the visitors spent some time inspecting the grounds and gardens of St. James Park before the return trip was begun.

Although this was the first time Connellsville King's Daughters undertook to entertain a state convention they came through with colors flying and the delegates were highly appreciative of the efforts made to make their stay pleasant.

Most of the visitors left for their homes early today.

Omission of the Reformed Church from the list of churches represented in the King's Daughters as published in yesterday's Courier was taken exception to today by members of the Trinity Reformed Church. It was stated today that, while the local church has no chapter of the organization, the national church was represented, and two members of the executive board are affiliated with the Reformed Church.

Rev. C. E. Wagner of the Trinity Reformed Church led the devotional exercises, instead of Rev. Nelson as stated.

The convention closed last night with the most interesting session, the principal speaker being Madame Laylah Barakat of Philadelphia. Madame Barakat spoke on "Cedars of Lebanon." Rev. G. L. C. Richardson was in charge of the devotional exercises and Miss Marian Munson and John Davis sang. A report on resolutions was given by Mrs. H. A. Tompkins. "Closing Thoughts" by Mrs. Fred Derby and the benediction closed the program. Miss M. Irene Boyer, recording secretary, in a few remarks made special mention of the vocal solos rendered by Mrs. Helen Knox. She extended Mrs. Knox an invitation to sing at the next annual state convention to be held in Philadelphia.

CAR HTS TREE

Palge Machine in Collision; Occupants Escape.

J. J. Buttermore's new Palge touring car was slightly damaged this morning when it crashed into a tree on Johnston avenue. Miss Florence Buttermore, who was driving, and George S. Connel, escaped unhurt. In making the turn from Fayette street to Johnston avenue, Miss Buttermore's car caught the hind wheel, it is believed, causing the car to plunge ahead and strike the tree before she could straighten out the front wheels.

Cemetery Condition Bad.

With Memorial Day only 10 days off, the condition of the lots in Chestnut Hill cemetery is declared to be terrible by William H. Shaw, who declares that this should certainly be cleaned up and made one of the beauty spots of the city. Mr. Shaw blames the "search for the almighty dollar" for this neglect.

Ruine Street at Bridge.

South Pittsburgh street, at Trump run, is being brought up to the level of the bridge. Since the bridge was last repaired, its planks were so much higher than the street, that motorists complained of the "bumps" sustained in crossing. This fault is now being corrected.

About it will be draped American flags and throughout the stage and auditorium will be emblems of this country's allies.

A chorus choir under the direction of John Davis will lead the singing. After the invocation by Rev. Ellis B. Burgess, pastor of Trinity Lutheran church, the audience will sing "America," and Mrs. Robert Morton, wife of the commander of Company D, Tenth Regiment, will lead in singing "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

SUNDAY SCHOOL VISITATION DAY

Sunday Set Aside For Inspection; Speculation as to Place of Next Convention.

Visitation day in the Sunday schools of the county will be observed tomorrow. Every school in the county will be visited by a member of another school. The assignments were made some time ago.

An important meeting of the executive committee of the Fayette County Sunday School association will be held this afternoon in Uniontown to select a place for the annual county convention which was scheduled to be held in Brownsville, August 28 and 29. Brownsville people at a recent meeting decided that they would be unable to entertain the convention this summer, and the district organization of that section notified the executive committee to select another town for the event.

Connellsville, Dunbar and Uniontown are mentioned for the county convention in August. A definite decision has been alternating at Uniontown, Brownsville and Connellsville, and by this program, Connellsville would have the convention in 1918. The executive committee will likely choose some other place for this year's sessions, in order not to break up the regular program.

Visitation day, observed tomorrow, was inaugurated by the association some years ago. Each visitor is asked to study the Sunday school during the progress of the session, and at the end is expected to make a short talk on his observations. He is asked to emphasize teacher training in his talk, since the association has for one of its aims the institution of a teacher training class in every Sunday school in the county.

Smithfield Citizens Fear Fine Old Residence Will be Lost.

Smithfield residents are preparing to make an effort to save the residence and outbuildings of the late Dr. H. B. Mathiot, which is considered one of the finest in this section of the state. The Mathiot estate has been sold to W. A. Stone of Hopwood by Dr. W. A. Longenecker of Pittsburgh for $30,000. It contains about 40 acres, eight of which are underlaid with coking coal.

The coal will be mined and it is feared that the house and outbuildings will be destroyed unless proper supports are placed after the coal is removed. As one man says, "every old citizen in Smithfield has a personal pride in it." The building at present is occupied by Misses Perle and Carrie Mathiot, two of the three direct heirs. They will give up possession of the house on September 1.

NEW STREET PLAN

City to Repair Breaks at Expense of Parties Responsible.

Members of city council yesterday decided to repair the damage to streets caused by imperfect closing of excavations by the water and gas companies by having the city street force do the work and charging the cost to the responsible corporations.

The councilmen who had assembled in the afternoon to go over the streets with General Superintendent J. E. Angle of the Fayette County Gas Company and Superintendent A. E. Halstead of the Connellsville Water Company, called off the inspection after a conference and decided to adopt the city scheme. Mr. Angle agreed to the proposition, and Mr. Halstead said he would submit the matter to officials of his company.

VISITS POST

Department Commander Arnesburg here; Special Meeting held. William F. Kurtz Post, No. 104, G. A. R., met yesterday afternoon in special session to meet the department commander, L. F. Ransburg of Uniontown, who paid the post a visit, as prescribed in the regulations of the organization. Though these visits of the commander are supposed to be made annually, this is the first time in some years that the local post has been so honored.

With Commander Arnesburg were four of his staff: E. K. Snyder, A. I. Ellis, W. T. Kennedy, and C. L. Smith, all of Uniontown. The post was called together immediately upon their arrival, and convened in the parlors of the Yough House. Commander W. F. Clark introduced Commander Arnesburg to the comrades, and asked the visitor for a talk. The commander complimented the post on its energy and general activity, and especially commended the birthday visit inaugurated by the local men, and which feature he said he expected would be introduced elsewhere. Commander Clark read a complete history of the local post. Each of the visiting staff members, and several of the Connelville comrades gave talks.

FIGHT OVER BILL

Jenkins left a forfeit of $5 and was released. A charge of fighting was made against Lyton, and he will be given a hearing tomorrow morning.

THE DESERT MAN

"THE DESERT MAN"—A five part drama, in which William S. Hart, the favorite screen star, is seen in his most dramatic role. The story is a tale of the desert, and a two reel Keystone comedy are today's attractions. In "The Desert Man," Mr. Hart is seen in a somewhat different role than those he has lately portrayed. The almost human intelligence of some dumb brutes is strikingly displayed. The three exponents of his intelligence are a horse and two dogs. In the picture Mr. Hart has the role of a cowboy. A man, who is seen riding across the desert in search of some range for himself and horse. In the distance he sees some broken down trucks that hold out at least a promise of shelter. At the outskirts of the poor looking settlement he meets a young woman and a child, who have been driven from their home by the brutality of the woman's husband. She has just strength enough left to warn the man back of the wretched township when she dies in the desert. The man takes the child, and rider, and horse stumble on. He reaches the first of the dilapidated wooden buildings and learns that this was once the town of Golden Hope, but is now deserted save for a few stragglers who were too poor to leave when the pay struck ran out. With bitter irony these men had relettered the sign to read "Broken Hope." The stranger is a silent man who is nicknamed the Crouch. He later finds himself deeply in love with a young girl named Jennie. In the picture Mr. Hart makes a notorious cleanup of a gambling den. Next Thursday Roscoe Arbuckle, the famous comedian will be seen in his late comedy, "The Butcher Boy."

TO STOP WASTE IN SHIPPING COAL

Purpose of Committee of Opponents of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

A committee representing the coal producers of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, shipping to ports on the Great Lakes was formed in Washington, D. C., on Saturday for the purpose of preventing waste in the shipment of coal. The formation of the committee was the outcome of a conference participated in by coal producers of the American Railway Association of the Council of National Defense, representatives of the lake steamship and dock interests and operating officials of lake line railroads.

The duty of the committee will be to arrange for shipments of coal to be classified according to their grades and regardless of their ownership, so they can be transported to lake ports expeditiously and loaded into vessels at docks at once, also to quicken movements and release car equipment and vessels. This can be done only by treating all the coal to be moved as being the product of one mine or of one operator.

The problem is to move 36,000,000 tons of coal from Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee to the upper lake ports and to bring back 51,000,000 tons of ore. Of the latter only 36,000,000 will have to be moved from the lake front, furnishing in that district consuming the remaining 15,000,000 tons.

H. P. McCue, superintendent of transportation of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, W. L. Robinson, of the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal company, and M. A. Guthrie, of United Coal company, represent Western Pennsylvania on this committee. C. H. Jenkins, of Fairmont, represents the operators of the Fairmont region.

When will You Cut Your Equipment Costs

75% and Use Smith Form-a-Trucks?

Smith Form-a-Truck

C. O. B. Chicago

Horse-drawn delivery and hauling saddles you with an excess cost for equipment that can easily amount to 75% over your entire investment.

A Money Saver

Smith Form-a-Truck eliminates all unnecessary investment in delivery and hauling equipment. It easily hauls twice the tonnage hauled by horses over three times the area and in the same time. This is real hauling and delivery efficiency—time saving, money earning in every line of business.

Loaders' & Drivers' Wages

Where you now use from three to four horse-drawn teams, one Smith Form-a-Truck will easily do the work. Loaders' and drivers' wages are saved. The men on the loading platform work steadily and earn money for you instead of wasting it waiting for slow moving teams to get back.

Horses Must Rest

Your excessively large, horse-drawn equipment costs you money for upkeep on working and non-working days. Stabling, feed, veterinary bills go on all the time—and for steady service all day you must have extra equipment to give the horses a rest.

Expense Stops

Smith Form-a-Truck costs nothing to maintain when it is not working. Stop the motor and the expense stops until you start it up again. There is no non-production expense. And the actual cost of maintenance when Smith Form-a-Truck is running is not only far less than for horses, but less than for any other form of hauling or delivery.

A Big Guarantee

And you can put Smith Form-a-Truck at work in a few hours. Simply attach it to any Ford, Maxwell, Buick, Chevrolet, Dodge Bros., or Overland power plant. The truck construction is permanent—fully guaranteed—the mechanical equal of the highest priced truck you can buy.

Rear Axle Carries Load

You know the service value, the economy standard of the famous power plants with which Smith Form-a-Truck can be used. And the power plant only pulls the load. The Smith Form-a-Truck carries it—90% of the entire load rests on the sturdy Smith Form-a-Truck rear axle.

Be One of 30,000

Don't put up with wasteful expense in your hauling or delivery for another day. Get your order in for Smith Form-a-Truck now. Be one of the 30,000 sure of getting delivery this year. Join the 18,000 present satisfied users.

If you have any doubt, ask for a demonstration. It will be a revelation to you to see the actual money saving Smith Form-a-Truck will make for you.

Connellsville hasn't been visited by one of these fakirs for some time, presumably because the public is getting wise to their scheme, which is to pass as a doctor and attract the unsuspecting public by the alluring offer of

The trick is to entice you in and then by their smooth talk to frighten you with their untruthful statements about the serious condition of your eyes and health.

The result generally is, the victim pays several dollars for something he could buy at the 10c store.

These fakirs are now working in this section of the state and may sometime in the near future be in Connellsville—if they can find a storekeeper unscrupulous enough to rent them a window and a little space.

THE COAL TAX BILL PASSED FINALLY BY THE LOWER HOUSE

But May Repose in Committee Or Be Smothered By The Senate.

A TAX OF TWO PER CENT

On Every Ton of Bituminous and Anthracite Coal Mined Within the State; Is Favored by the Administration; May Not Become a Law.

The Woodward bill placing an ad valorem tax of two per cent. upon bituminous coal, together with the bills taxing crude, petroleum and natural gas, passed the House finally at Harrisburg, last week and were referred to the finance committee. The passage of the bills is said to have received about the same attention that would be given to the repeal of an obsolete law. There was no discussion of the measures, which would raise millions of dollars and add to the burdens of the people. The only excuse for the apparent indifference is the general belief that the Senate will smother the three proposed laws.

The coal tax bill had been approved by Governor Brumbaugh and the joint revenue commission of the legislature. It had been drawn by Attorney General Brown with particular care to withstand any attack that may be made upon its constitutionality, to which test it is certain to be subjected in event of passage by the Senate and approved by Governor Brumbaugh.

The tax is to be paid into the state treasury within 60 days after the assessment has been made. Twelve per cent. interest is to be paid if payment is delayed beyond that period. One-half of the amount derived from this tax is to be used in the construction, maintenance, improvement and repairs of the public highways of the commonwealth. The tax is two per cent. of the market value of the coal.

The taxing of the coal production of the state of Pennsylvania has been a much agitated question for many years and the proposition has had some illustrious supporters, but all efforts to place the burden of taxation upon this commercial and household necessity have thus far proved unsuccessful. The act passed by the legislature of 1913, under which tax was levied upon and collected from a number of anthracite operators, was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of the state, and the tax paid under its provisions has been or will be practically refunded to the operators by the decision of the Auditor General, who will in future deduct from their tax levies the sums paid under the 1913 act. The state cannot make a direct refund of the tax, but the same end is attained by this method.

The act of 1916, which is similar to that of 1913, has not yet been declared unconstitutional, but no tax has been levied under its provisions and it is not intended that any shall be. To overcome the legal difficulties heretofore met with in imposing a coal tax the Woodward bill was drafted and introduced into the present session of the legislature by which every ton of 2,240 pounds of both bituminous and anthracite coal will be taxed two per centum of value as prepared for market. The assessment is to be made when the coal has been mined or washed and made ready for shipment or for market. It is made the duty of the superintendent or other person in charge of the mine or washery to assess the tax on the daily output and to fix the value thereof. Reports are to be made monthly and yearly to the Auditor General. The owner, lessee or operator must see that the assessments and reports are made, and a severe penalty is provided for failure to comply with the law.

The proposed measure finds less favor in the Senate than in the House.

Busy Times on the Great Lakes.
Navigation on the Great Lakes is now open, and the familiar sound of steamboat whistles is indeed a welcome one to many, for not only do the steamers afford relief from the freight congestion but also furnish a most comfortable mode of travel for passengers.

Officials of the C. & B. Lines which operate the Great Ship "Secundus" and Steamers "City of Buffalo" and "City of Erie" daily between Cleveland and Buffalo, predict that this season will surpass all others in volume of passenger and freight traffic. Never has business started with such a rush which surely reflects the general prosperous condition of the country.

Vacation trips which afford change from the every day scenes are repeople, and thousands are now turn-

The Most Beautiful Car in America

YOU may be one of the thousands of people who have planned to buy a Paige Linwood "Six-39" this spring. If so, let us suggest that you place your order immediately.

There is a tremendous demand for these beautiful five-passenger models. Orders are pouring into the factory from all sections of the country, and it is a foregone conclusion that our "Linwood" production will fall far short of the demand.

Then, also, remember that the cost of manufacturing materials is steadily advancing. Each day it becomes more difficult—and consequently more expensive—to secure the steel, aluminum, copper and brass that are found in a car like the "Linwood."

Right now, you can buy one of these cars for $1775.
If you delay the matter too long, you may have to pay considerably more. Or, as we said in the beginning, it may be impossible to secure early delivery on a Linwood at any price.

MORE CARS WILL ONLY MEAN STILL MORE CONGESTION

Railroads Are Operating at the Utmost of Their Capacity.

NOT ENOUGH TRACK ROOM

Hence More Cars Would Merely Result in Congestion, Becoming Unmanageable. More Engines Would Hinder, Not Help, Same as Too Many Cars.

A railroad official, who is chief of the transportation department of one of the important railway systems of the country which serves large coal mining and coke producing sections, was recently interviewed by a correspondent of the Coal Trade Journal with request to answer the question, "Is there any hope of betterment in car supply for the coal and coke trade of Pennsylvania this year?"

Disclaiming the gift of prophecy, which the official regarded as necessary to peer into the future, he declined to answer more directly than to say, "I could not honestly answer for I don't know."

Calling attention to the fact that tracks are built with a fixed capacity for carrying men and freight, the official explained the present situation of the railroads is like that of a steel mill which has reached its maximum capacity and needs new power, more men, new buildings and more room. "Here," he said, "is where we find the railroads today."

"They have added car equipment until they cannot add more without causing a greater congestion and making actual freight movement slower than ever. They cannot add locomotives without congesting round-houses and blockading them. They, in other words, have reached the limit of track capacity, not only of sidings but of main line, and to relieve this abnormal situation, they will have to go back to the beginning, build more main line tracks, more bridges, and trestles, and expend hundreds of millions of dollars for right-of-way and construction work that will, as a foundation alone, require several years' time. And when they do this, if they should, it would be with the knowledge that before it is fairly well started, the cause for all of the abnormal activity, the great war, will end, and it will not be necessary to provide the increased facilities."

"The situation of the railroads in the eastern section of the country is outlined as simply as I can make it appear in this explanation. It is a case where everything in the world is on an abnormal basis. Emergencies have arisen that no one ever contemplated. To meet them would be a physical impossibility without years of labor and billions of dollars new capital when the entire country is considered. And it is, or would not it be, an act of sound, sane judgment to go to those tremendous lengths to cover a temporary situation in the world, that we all know must soon come to an abrupt end."

"In the meantime, our coal shippers, coke shippers, iron and steel shippers, and all others, must recognize that when we cannot get more, we must use what we have to the very best of our ability."

"More cars will hinder, not help. The situation, for they would not have track room enough to move, and congestion would become unmanageable. Scientific proportioning of cars is the only alternative."

"Increasing motive power beyond its present maximum would hinder, and not help, the situation just the same as would too many cars. Siding capacity increased, would be out of proportion to main line facilities and would cause blockades there also."

"Finally getting back to the fundamentals, to build new main line capacity at this time would reduce the present capacity and at a time when it is needed to its fullest extent (desperately)."

"I guess you can see about the situation, we are in from this outline. The immediate future, is going to be difficult, but with patience, and the united help from all shippers which are vitally essential in securing the best results out of a grave and critical situation, the most critical this nation has ever confronted, we can yet make a much better showing in moving our increased business."

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS
President American Society for Thrift

In order to appreciate the necessity of economy in household matters, it is worth while to consider something of the general food supply conditions throughout the world. Not only has the demand far outstripped the supply in the United States during the past ten years, but this is true also in all of the great food producing countries of the world. All humanity has been going through a shortage of corn, wheat and meats of all kinds, which is becoming daily more acute. The Argentine Republic has been the victim of a series of droughts. In 1909 there was an appalling drought in Argentina, since which time the rate of slaughter has been far greater than its productivity and the government is considering barring the export of sheep and cattle. Australia and New Zealand have also suffered excessive droughts. In the United States live stock of all kinds is deficient, and the worst feature is that the whole country is short of breeding stock. In the last ten years the decline in raising stock in Illinois has been 40 per cent, and in Iowa 30 per cent, and these are the chief cattle states of the great American corn belt. Texas has had a succession of droughts, and there has been a shortage of grass in the more northern cattle regions. Attractive prices have caused over-marketing of all kinds of live stock. Stock Yards in Chicago says:

"If the war should cease today and all efforts should be made to increase the cattle production of the country, it would take from six to ten years in the best of conditions to build up a normal supply."

These are cold, plain statements of fact. They mean that if we are to avoid famine and do our duty toward our nation and those allied with us in this great war, we must learn personal economy. We must learn to eat less meat and less food of all kinds and to deny ourselves not only the luxuries of life that have been ours during our years of snug prosperity, but we must eliminate many of the actual comforts of daily life. We must learn to adjust ourselves to new conditions.

Mrs. Thos. R. Marshall, wife of the Vice-President of the United States, discussing the duties of the women of America along this line, says:

"If the average woman will give personal attention to her household, she could save a lot of money. I don't necessarily mean scrub her own floors, but go in her own kitchen and keep her eye on things out there."

Every man, woman and child can help a little in eliminating waste. Let us remember that the military situation is no more important than the problem of food supply and domestic economy. Every penny's worth of waste today adds that much weight to the seriousness of our nation's condition. Let each of us do his bit.

SEEKS BIG DAMAGES

County Treasurer Sues Prothonotary For Failure to Issue Writ.

UNIONTOWN, May 18.—George Orville Rush, county treasurer, today filed suit against Prothonotary George M. Rathmell for $15,000 damages. He claims that on May 15, through his attorney, H. S. Dumbauld, he presented a praecipes to Prothonotary Rathmell asking for writs against W. M. Thompson and T. W. Semans on judgments for $10,571.67. He claims that the prothonotary refused to issue the writs claiming that he had received no word to the effect that the receiverships of Thompson and Semans had been thrown out by the Supreme Court. He also claims that the prothonotary refused to endorse the praecipes with his reasons for refusing.

On May 16 the receiverships were withdrawn and Mr. Rush claims that others were thus permitted to get in ahead of him.

PETEY DINK—The Perils of Pete. "Good Night." Part Five.

The spy was rolling a cigarette and his half-closed eyes had a murderous glint in them.

"Me, for instance?" he inquired coolly.

"Anybody," said Stanton absently. He was going over the list of stockholders again and had scarcely heard what Shaw had said.

"That brings us down to business, Mr. Stanton," said the ex-railroad clerk slowly. "I'm not getting money enough out of this to cover the risk—any risk."

The man at the desk looked up quickly.

"What's that you say? By heavens, Shaw, I've spoken once, and I'll do it just this one time more; you sing small if you want to keep out of jail!"

Shaw had lighted his cigarette and was edging toward the door.

"Not this trip, Mr. Stanton," he said coolly. "If you've got me, I've got you. I can find two men who will go into court and swear that you paid Pete Simms money to have Smith snatched, that day out at Simms' place at the dam! I may have to go to jail, as you say; but I'll bet you live to see that you'll beat me to it!" And with that he snapped the catch on the locked door and went away.

Since three hours after this rather hostile clash with the least trustworthy but by far the most able of his henchmen, Crawford Stanton left his wife chatting comfortably with Miss Richlander in the hotel parlors and went reluctantly to keep an appointment which he had been dreading ever since the early afternoon hour when a wire had come from Condit directing him to meet the "Nevada Flyer" upon its arrival at Brewster. The public knew the name signed to the telegram as that of a millionaire statesman; but Stanton knew it best as the name of a hard and not over-ambitious master.

The train was whistling for the station when Stanton descended from his cab and hurried down the long platform. A white-jacketed porter was waiting to admit him to the presence when the train came to a stand, and as he climbed into the vestibule of the luxurious private car, Stanton got what comfort he could out of the thought that the interview would necessarily be limited by the ten minutes' engine-changing stop of the fast train.

Stanton, ten minutes later, made a flying leap from the moving train. At the end of the car he found the motor cab which he had hired for the drive down from the hotel. Climbing in, he gave a brittle order to the chauffeur. Simultaneously a man wearing the stiffest of hats loomed away from his post of observation under a nearby electric pole and ran across the railroad plaza to unhitch and mount a very little cow pony. Once in the saddle, however, the mounted man did not hurry his horse. Having overheard Stanton's order giving, there was no need to keep the motor cab in sight as it spluttered through the streets and out upon the backgrounding mesa, its tin-smelling course ending at a lonely roadhouse in the mesa hills on the Topaz trail.

When the hired vehicle came to a stand in front of the lighted barroom of the roadhouse, Stanton gave a waiting order to the driver and went in. Of the dog-faced barkeeper he asked an abrupt question, and at the man's jerk of a thumb toward the rear, the promoter passed on and entered the private room at the back of the main saloon. The private room had but one occupant—the man Landersby, who was sitting behind a round card table and vainly endeavoring to make one of the pair of empty whisky glasses spin in a complete circuit about a black bottle standing on the table.

The hired car was still waiting when Stanton went out through the barroom and gave the driver his return orders. And, because the night was dark, neither of the two at the bar saw the man in the soft hat as he slipped himself up from his crouching place under the backroom window and vanished silently in the gloom.

CHAPTER XV.

A Night of Fiascos.

Smith had seen nothing of Miss Richlander during the day, partly because there was a forenoon meeting of the High Line stockholders called for the purpose of electing him secretary and treasurer in fact of the company, and partly because the major portion of the afternoon was spent in conference with Williams at the dam.

Returning from the dam site quite late in the evening, Smith spent a hard-working hour or more at his desk in the Kinzie building offices; and it was here that Starbuck found him.

"What?" said the new secretary, looking up from his work when Starbuck's very figure loomed in the doorway. "I thought you were once more a family man, and had cut out the night howling."

Starbuck jackknifed himself comfortably in a chair.

"I was. But the little girl's run away again; gone with her sister—Maxwell's wife, you know—to Denver to get her teeth fixed; and I'm foot-loose. Been hitting in a little on your game, this evening, just to be doing. How's tricks with you, now?"

"We're strictly in the fight," declared Smith enthusiastically. "We closed the deal today for the last half-mile of the main ditch right of way, which puts us up on the mesa slope above the Escalante grant. If they knock us out now, they'll have to do it with dynamite."

"Yes," said the ex-cowman, thoughtfully; "with dynamite." Then: "How is Williams getting along?"

"Fine! The water is crawling up on him a little every night, but with no accident, he'll be able to hold the flood rise when it comes. The only thing that worries me now is the time limit."

"The time limit?" echoed Starbuck. "What's that?"

"It's the handicap we inherit from the original company. Certain state rights to the water were conveyed in the old charter, on condition that the project should be completed, or at least be far enough along to turn water into the ditches, by a given date. This time limit, which carries over from High Line Ditch to Timanyoni High Line, expires next week. We're petitioning for an extension, but if we don't get it we shall still be able to back the water up so that it will flow into the lower level of ditches by next Thursday; that is, barring accidents."

"With no accidents," mused Starbuck. "Can't get out of the 'if,' no way nor shape, can we? So that's why the Stanton people have been fighting so volubly for delay, is it? John, this is a wicked, wicked world." Then he switched abruptly. "Where did you corral all these good looks you took to the opera house last night, John?"

Smith's laugh was strictly perfumery.

"That was Miss Vera Richlander, an old friend of mine from back home. She is out here with her father, and the father has gone up into the Topaz country to buy him a gold brick."

"Not in the Topaz," Starbuck struck in loudly. "We don't make the bricks up there—not the phony kind. But let that go and tell me something else. A while back, when you were giving me a little song and dance about the colonel's daughter, you mentioned another woman—though not by name. If you happen to recollect, I was just wondering if this Miss Rich-people, or whatever her name is, might be the other one."

Again the new secretary laughed—this time without embarrassment.

"You're called the turn, Billy. She is the other one."

"If I'm chasing you up?"

"Oh, no; it was just one of the near-miracles. She didn't know I was here, and I had no hint that she was coming."

"All right; it's your roast; not mine. But I'm going to pull one chestnut out of the fire for you, even if I get my fingers burned. This Miss Rich-people has had only one day here in Brewster, but she's used it in getting mighty chummy with the Stanton's. Does that figure as news to you?"

"It does," said Smith simply; and he added: "I don't understand it."

"Funny," remarked the ex-cowman. "It didn't hit me up for more than a minute or two. Stanton fixed it some way—because he needed to. Tell me something, John: could this Miss Rich-people help Stanton out in any of his little schemes, if she took a notion?"

Smith turned away and stared at the blackened square of outer darkness lying beyond the office window.

"She could, Billy—but she won't," he answered.

"You can dig up your last dollar and bet on that, can you?"

"Yes, I think I can."

"H'm; that's just what I was most afraid of."

"Don't be an ass, Billy."

"I'm trying mighty hard not to be John, but sometimes the ears will grow on the best of us—in spite of the devil. What I mean is this: I saw you two when you came out of the Hopfurn dining room together last night, and I saw the look in that girl's eyes. Do you know what I said to myself right then, John? I said: 'Oh, you little girl out at the Hillcrest ranch—good-by, you!'"

Smith's grin was half antagonistic. "You are an ass, Billy," he asserted. "I never was in love with Vera Richlander, nor she with me."

"Speak for yourself and let it hang there, John. You can't speak for the woman—no man ever can. What I'm hoping now is that she doesn't know anything about you that Stanton could make use of."

Again the High Line's new secretary turned to stare at the black-backed grounded window.

"You mean that she might hear of—of Miss Corona?" he suggested.

"You've roped it down, at least," said the friendly enemy. "Stanton'll tell her—he'll tell her anything and everything that might make her turn loose-any little bit of information she may have about you. As I said a minute ago, I'm hoping she hasn't got anything on you, John."

Smith was still facing the window when he replied. "I'm sorry to have to disappoint you, Starbuck. What Miss Richlander could do to me, if she chooses, would be good and plenty."

The ex-cowman mine owner drew a long breath and felt for his tobacco sack and rice-paper.

"All of which opens up more talk trails," he said thoughtfully. "Since you wouldn't try to take care of yourself, and since your neck happens to be the most valuable asset Timanyoni High Line has, just at present, I've been battling in, as I told you. Listen to my tale of woe, if you haven't anything better to do. Besides the Miss Rich-ranchies episode there are a couple of others. Want to hear about 'em?"

Smith nodded.

"All right. A little while past dinner this evening, Stanton had a hurry call to meet the 'Nevada Flyer.' Dailed onto the train there was a private luxury car, and in the private car sat a gentleman who, for some reason, you've seen plenty of times in the political cartoons, usually with cross-words under it. He is one of Stanton's bosses; and Stanton was in for a wigging—and got it. I couldn't hear, but I could see—through the car window. He had Stanton standing on one foot before the train pulled out and let Crawford make his get-away. You guess, and I'll guess, and we'll both say it was about this Escalante snap which is aiming to be known as the Escalante fiasco. Ain't it the truth?"

Again Smith nodded, and said, "Go on."

"After number five had gone Stanton broke for his auto, looking like he could bite a nail in two. I happened to hear the order 'drive to the shore,' and I had my camera hitched over. Bob Shurkey's joint. Naturally, I snatched along after Crawford, and while I didn't beat him to it, I got there soon enough. It was out at Jeff Barton's roadhouse on the Topaz trail, and Stanton was shut up in the back room with a sort of tin-horn 'band man' named Landersby."

"You listened?" said Smith still without engerance.

"Right you are. And they fooled me. Two schemes were on tap: one pointing at Williams and the dam, and the other at you. These were both fast reports; Stanton said he had one more string to pull first. If that broke—well, I've said it half a dozen times already, John, you'll either have to hire a bodyguard or go holed. I'm telling you right here and now, that bunch is going to get you, even if it costs money!"

"You say Stanton said he had one more string to pull; he didn't give it a name, did he?"

"No, but I've got a notion of my own," was the ready answer. "He's trying to get next to you through the women, with the Miss Rich-people for his can opener. But when everything else fails, he is to send a password to Landersby, one of two passwords. 'Williams' means dynamite and the dam; 'Jake' means the removal from the map of a fellow named Smith. Nice prospect, isn't it?"

Smith was jabbing his paper knife absently into the desk blotter. "And yet we go on calling this a civilized country," he said meditatively. Then with a sudden change of front: "I'm in this fight to stay until I win out or die out, Billy; you know that. As I have said, Miss Verda can kill me if she chooses to; but she won't choose to. Now let me go to work. It's pretty late to rout a justice of the peace out of bed to issue a warrant for us, but we'll do it. Then we'll go after Landersby and make him turn state's evidence. Come on; let's get busy."

But Starbuck, reaching softly for a chair-lighting handhold upon Smith's desk, made no reply. Instead he snatched his little body out of the chair and launched it in a sudden tiger spring at the door. To Smith's astonishment, the door, which should have been latched, came in at Starbuck's wrenching jerk of the knob, bringing with it, instead, and with the breath started out of him, the new stenographer, Shaw.

"There's your state's evidence," said Starbuck grimly, pushing the half-dazed door listener into a chair. "Just put the sugar a couple of inches into this fellow and see what you can find."

Richard Shaw had an exceedingly bad quarter of an hour when Smith and Starbuck applied the thumbcrews to force a confession out of him. Nevertheless, knowing the dangerous ground upon which he stood, he evaded and shuffled and prevaricated under the charges and questionings until it became apparent that nothing short of bribery or physical torture would get the truth out of him. Smith was not willing to offer the bribe, and since the literal thumbcrews were out of the question, Shaw was locked into one of the vacant rooms across the corridor until his captors could determine what was to be done with him.

"That is one time when I dread and missed the whole side of the barn," Starbuck admitted, when Shaw had been remanded to the makeshift cell across the hall. "I know that fellow is on Stanton's payroll; and it's reasonably certain that he got his job with you so that he could keep cutes on you. But we can't prove anything that we say, so long as he refuses to talk."

"No," Smith agreed. "I can discharge him, and that's about all that can be done with him."

"He is a pretty smooth article," said Starbuck reflectively. "He used to be a clerk in Maxwell's railroad office, and he was mixed up in some kind of crookedness, I don't remember just what."

Smith caught quickly at the suggestion.

"Wait a minute, Billy," he broke in; and then: "There's no doubt in your mind that he's a spy?"

"Sure he is," was the prompt rejoinder.

"I was just thinking—he has heard what was said here tonight—which is enough to give Stanton a pretty good chance to outfigure our outfit again."

"Right you are."

"In which case it would be little short of idiotic in us to let him loose. We've got to hold him, prove or disprove. Where would we be apt to catch Maxwell at this time of night?"

"At home and in bed, I reckon."

"Call him up the phone and state the case briefly. Tell him if he has any alibi on Shaw that would warrant us in turning him over to the sheriff, we'd like to know it."

"You're getting the range now," laughed the ex-cowman, and instead of using the desk set, he went to shut himself into the sound-proof telephone closet.

When he emerged a few minutes later he was grinning exultantly. "That was sure a smooth one of yours, John. Dick gave me the facts. Shaw's a thief; but he has a sick sister on his hands—or said he had—and the railroad didn't prosecute. Dick says for us to jug him tonight and tomorrow morning he'll swear out the necessary papers."

"Good. We'll do that first; and then we'll get after this fellow Landersby. I want to get Stanton where I can pinch him, Billy; so, there's nothing personal about it; but when a great corporation like the Escalante Land company gets down to plain anarchy and dynamiting, it's time to make somebody sweat for it. Let's go and get Shaw."

Together they went across the corridor, and Smith unlocked the door of the disused room. The light switch was on the door-lamb and Starbuck found and pressed the button. The single incandescent bulb hanging from the ceiling sprang alive—and showed the two men at the door an empty room and an open window. The bird had flown.

Starbuck was grinning again when he went to look out of the window. The roof of the adjoining building was only a few feet below the sill level and there was a convenient fire escape ladder leading to the ground.

"It's us for that roadhouse out on the Topaz trail before the news gets around to Stanton and Landersby," he said, definitely; and they lost no time in securing an auto for the dash.

But not too soon, for to be a fiasco. When they reached Barton's all-night place on the hill road, the bar was still open and a card game was running in an upstairs room. Starbuck did the necessary cross-questioning of the dog-faced bartender.

"You know me, Pug, and what I can do to you if I have to. We want Hank Landersby. Pitch out and show us where."

The barkeeper threw up one hand as if he were warding off a blow.

"You'd have him in a holy minute, for all of me, Billy; you sure could," he protested. "He's gone."

"On the level?" snapped Starbuck. "That's straight; I wouldn't lie to you, Billy. Telephone call came from town a little spell ago, and I got Hank outa bed to answer it. He borra'd Barton's mare and faded inside of a pair o' minutes."

"Which way?" demanded the questioner.

"T' the hills; leastways he ain't headin' fr town when he breaks from here."

Starbuck turned to Smith with a wry smile.

"Shaw beat us to it and he scored on us," he said. "We may as well like back, phone Williams to keep his eye on things up at the dam, and go to bed. There'll be nothing more doing tonight."

CHAPTER XVI.

At Any Cost.

With all things moving favorably for Timanyoni High Line up to the night of fiascos, the battle for the great water-right seemed to take a sudden slant against the local promoters, after the failure to cripple Stanton by the attempt to suppress two of his subordinates. Early the next day there were playful rumors in the air, none of them traceable to any definite starting point.

One of the stories was to the effect that the Timanyoni dam had fully commenced and that the haste in building had added to its insecurity. On the heels of this came clamorous court petitions from ranch owners below the dam site, setting forth the flood dangers to which they were exposed and praying for an injunction to stop the work.

That this was a new move on Stanton's part, neither Smith nor Stillings questioned for a moment; but they no sooner got the nervous ranchmen pacified by giving an indemnity bond for any damage that might be done, than other rumors sprang up. For one day and yet another Smith fought mechanically, developing the machine-like doggedness of the soldier who sees the battle going irresistibly against him and still smites on in sheer desperation. He saw the carefully built organization structure, reared by his own efforts upon the foundation laid by Colonel Baldwin and his ranchman associates, falling to pieces. In spite of all he could do, there was a panic of stock-selling; the city council, dismayed by the persistent story of the unsafety of the dam, was threatening to cancel the lighting contract with Timanyoni High Line; and Kinzie, though he was doing nothing openly, had caused the word to be passed far and wide among the Timanyoni stockholders, disaster could be averted now only by prompt action and the swift enforcement of their rule-or-ruin secretary and treasurer.

"They're after you, John," was the way the colonel put it at the close of the second day of back-slipplings. "They say you're fiddling while Rome's a-burning! Maybe you know what they mean by that; I don't."

Smith did know. During the two days of stress Miss Verda had been very exacting. There had been another night at the theater and much time-killing after meals in the parlors of the Hopfurn house. Worse still, there had been a daylight auto trip about town and up to the dam. The victim was writhing miserably under the price-paying, but there seemed to be no help for it. Since the night of Verda's (Richlander's) arrival in Brewster, he had not seen Corona; he was telling himself that he had forfeited the right to see her. Out of the chaotic wreckage of things but one driving motive had survived, and it had grown to the stature of an obsession: the determination to win victory out of defeat for Timanyoni High Line; to fall, if he must fall, fighting to the last gasp and with his face to the enemy.

"I know," he said, replying after the reflective pause, to the charge passed on by Colonel Dexter. "There is a friend of mine here from the East, and I have been obliged to show her some not going to pull you and your wife and daughter into the lineal; if I can help it."

Colonel Dexter got out of his chair and walked to the office window. When he came back it was to say: "Are they sure-enough chasing you, John?—for something that you have done? Is that what you're trying to tell me?"

"That is it—and they are nearly here. Now you know at least one of the reasons why I can't go with you tonight. I'll be shot if I do," snarled the generous one. "I promised the missus I'd bring you."

"You must make my excuses to her, and to Corona; you may say that I am once more carrying a gun. She will understand."

"Which means, I take it, that you're been talking Corey more than you've told the rest of us. That brings on more talk, John. I haven't said a word before, have I?"

"No."

"Well, I'm going to say it now: I've got only just one daughter in the wide world, John."

Smith stood up and put his hands behind him, facing the older man squarely.

PREDICTS UPHEAVAL

Social Revolution Unless Rising Prices of Food Are Checked. By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Predictions of a social upheaval unless the rising prices of food are checked, were made by George W. Anderson, United States attorney at Boston and special assistant to Attorney General Gregory in coordination of food investigations today before the House agricultural committee in connection with the administration food control bill.

Mr. Anderson with great emphasis made this statement: "Something must be done. That a social and political upheaval is threatened cannot be denied or disregarded. I see the signs of it. There will be a phenomenon in America, inconsistent with law and order unless something is done to prevent it."

Mr. Anderson complained that the government is powerless under the present law to ascertain just what is held in storage.
